BlogED

Dear Parents/Carers,

1/2J students will be participating in a class blog this year. A blog is like a journal and is used on the internet. In our class, students will have the opportunity to access the web during class time to respond to information that they have learned through our Key Learning Areas. It is also a place where they can access games and tasks at home that help them to practise concepts they have learnt in class. As a 21st century learner, access to this blog will help your child to use digital tools to investigate, navigate, write and create. It is not a compulsory component for our class, merely another tool to help you and your child participate and share in what they have learnt throughout the year.

This blog is an account organised by the Department of Education (DoE) specifically for students and will be moderated by myself. It is a secure place where only students from 1/2J (and their parents/carers) can see what is being written. Students can only access this information with their specific DoE username and password. I will be explicitly teaching lessons on how to stay safe on the internet, during blogging.

Students can access the blog by logging into the following website https://student.det.nsw.edu.au using their DoE username and password. This will bring up their Kidspace page and under the subheading “BlogED”, they will find a link to our blog.

Once they click on “1/2J's Journey”, they will be able to complete the set tasks and play the games. Students are able to create their own blogs and will be learning more about this in class.

Please do not hesitate to contact me should you have any queries or concerns. I look forward to you seeing the wonderful things that we do in 1/2J!

Kind regards,

Ms J. Minenko
